CONCLUSION

BJP secured the highest number of seats in Uttar Pradesh (62), followed by Madhya Pradesh, Gujarat, Karnataka, and Rajasthan.

Congress performed best in Kerala (15 seats) and won smaller numbers in Punjab, Tamil Nadu, and other states.

BJP significantly outperformed Congress both in terms of total seats and votes.

BJP has a more balanced vote distribution across caste categories, whereas Congress relies more heavily on General category votes.

BJP's dominance in key states like Uttar Pradesh and Madhya Pradesh is a notable factor in their success.

The comparison of the 2014 and 2019 Indian general elections shows BJP's growing dominance, with an increase from 282 to 303 seats and a rise in vote share from 282M to 349M. Congress made slight gains, increasing from 44 to 52 seats and from 43M to 56M votes, while other parties saw a decline in vote share. BJP maintained a strong lead in margins, contributing 70% in 2019, underscoring its consolidation of support.

The election results between the NDA and I.N.D.I.A alliances. The NDA secured 403 million votes, winning 354 seats, while I.N.D.I.A received 126 million votes and won 113 seats out of a total of 543 seats. Voter turnout varied significantly across states, with Uttar Pradesh, West Bengal, and Bihar showing the highest participation. The NDA dominated with 65.67% of the total votes, while I.N.D.I.A managed 20.5%, and other parties accounted for 13.06%. The caste-based turnout shows the General category leading in participation, followed by SC, ST, and other groups. The data highlights the significant lead of the NDA over its competitors in terms of votes and seats won.
